Hevert Sinus Relief
Dear Customer,
With Hevert Sinus Relief you have chosen a safe and effective homeopathic medicine. Its active ingredients are generally well tolerated and provide relief of symptoms of nasal and sinus congestion. This medicine is suitable for adults and children aged 6 years and older.

How nasal and sinus congestion develops

The primary function of the mucous membranes of the respiratory tract is to protect the body from foreign particles and pathogens that have been inhaled. The body rids itself of viruses and bacteria by sneezing and coughing. Furthermore, substances produced by the nasal mucosa ward off "invaders". Stress and exhaustion during the wet and cold times of the year encourage viruses and bacteria to accumulate on the mucous membranes which reduces mucus drainage. Symptoms include an inflamed, congested nose and painful pressure in the head.

Healthy with homeopathy

Homeopathy is a natural treatment approach that was developed by German doctor Samuel Hahnemann in the early nineteenth century. The word homeopathy comes from the Greek words for "self" and "healing". Homeopathy is a holistic healing approach that views the body as a whole and treats the cause of the illness, not just the symptoms. The remedies are chosen based on the unique symptoms of each individual and are tailored to the patient. In addition, multiple remedies are often used, which is a type of stimulation therapy. Homeopathy treats illness with remedies that cause the patient to feel a mild version of the illness they are experiencing. This is known as the "like causes like" principle. Homeopathy is a natural holistic treatment that is generally well tolerated and has no addictive effects. If you understand this concept, you already understand the basic principle of homeopathy. "Similia similibus curentur" or "Let like be cured by like", as Samuel Hahnemann put it. Homeopathy is not the only form of natural healing, but it is a valuable and effective one. It is important to note that the remedies are carefully chosen to complement each other. Each substance gives the body specific qualities, and the body is able to use them to self-heal. In addition, homeopathy is a natural holistic treatment that is generally well tolerated and has no addictive effects.

Combination remedies and naturopath Emanuel Felke

One downside of classical homeopathy as it was developed by Hahnemann is the time-consuming process of choosing single homeopathic remedies. That is why homeopaths in practice today use multiple remedies to treat the different symptoms of an illness. For example, the flu.

The renowned German naturopath Emanuel Felke, who is also referred to as the father of combination remedy homeopathy, made Hahnemann’s homeopathy accessible to everyone. Felke combined different single homeopathic remedies to develop combination remedies. His goal was to achieve a higher success rate for a certain illness in one preparation. To develop these combination remedies, Felke studied the writings of Hahnemann and other naturopaths. Also, his vast experience with patients was instrumental for the efficacy of the remedies. For those combination homeopathic remedies, the single ingredients are carefully chosen to complement each other. Each substance gives the body specific qualities that help the body to return to a state of health. In this way, Felke’s formulation of a combination remedy was to set up his system of homeopathy.

Hevert – in the tradition of Emanuel Felke

When he founded the Hevert company in 1950, pharmacist Emil Hevert was also looking for a way to take advantage of his long experience with materia medica. "Hevert's combination remedies" to set up his system of natural medicine. Hevert was founded in Bad Sobernheim, Germany, in 1956 by Emil and Dorothea Hevert. The company is an independent family-run company. After being succeeded by Dr. Wolfgang Hevert, a doctor and pharmacist, the company is run today by his sons and grandchildren of the founder, Marcus and Matthias Hevert.

Today Hevert is one of the ten most important manufacturers of homeopathic remedies worldwide. With more than 100 remedies, the company’s extensive product portfolio has remedies for nearly all treatment areas, from fever to osteoarthritis. The company has five production facilities and is still the center of the Felke therapy movement, offering, in addition to homeopathy, the established natural remedies of sunlight, air, water, clay and diet based on natural foods. A large number of the formulations on which Hevert’s homeopathic remedies are based were developed in collaboration with Felke’s students.
